Pointers on Feeding Poultry.

Green food for winter feeding can be furnished by cabbage, clover, alfalfa, mangels, sprouted oats, turnips or pumpkins.

A good ration for fattening surplus cockerels is made of six parts by weight of corn meal, two of middlings, one-half of linseed meal, and two parts of best scraps. Mix with skim milk or tepid water until thick enough to drop but not run. Feed all they will eat in a trough, remove and clean the troughs after half an hour.

A ration consisting mostly of ordinary ground grains was more profitable when fed to chickens than a ration of whole grains; more food was eaten when the ground grain was fed than when the whole grain was fed.

A breeder who has kept careful account asserts that his chickens for the first six months cost him five cents a pound for every pound gained.

Hay and when we feed makes as much difference as when we feed. Let some one person take charge of the chickens, and feed them at regular hours giving variety of food. If the night is very cold, add more corn to the ration; keep the birds well fed, and don't omit the clover or other green food.

A good way to administer charcoal is by feeding corn chaffed till it is black. The laying hen needs twice as much feed as a hen that is not laying; she is manufacturing eggs and must be furnished with material for her work.

No one grain alone will keep a fowl in good condition; they must be furnished a variety.

Grit must be provided; even when here and there, the grit hoppers should be kept filled.

FRYBURG.

Edgar Booth has been ill at the home of his sister, Mrs. George Abbott.

Archibald Hurd, who was out of school on account of illness, has returned to Fryburg Academy.

Arlene Hutchins has returned from Orono, where she went to spend the week-end with her sister Mollie, who is a student at the University of Maine.

Mrs. J. W. Towle was given a birthday surprise party by her children on Thursday. On January 20th Mr. and Mrs. Towle observed their forty-ninth anniversary of their wedding.

George Walker has a remarkable cow among his herd. She observed Washington's birthday 1911 by presenting her owner with a pair of steer calves. Last Friday, Jan. 12, 1912, she repeated the gift making a family of four calves in less than eleven months.

The Fryburg Lumber Co. is doing a large amount of business this winter, having been obliged to work evenings part of the time during the past few weeks. Much lumber is being sawed. The plant backs are shipped mostly to New York and Boston. There are at present forty men in the employ of the company, thirty five of whom are local residents.

George Walker has recently added very much to the convenience of his house by installing a hot water air pressure water tank. The water is taken from a well at some distance from the house and a few minutes' exercise each day fills the tank with water and air at the same time. So great is the force that water can be forced with in farm buildings, an item to be considered by those living on isolated farms where they are utterly helpless in case of fire. With a boiler located near the stove, hot and cold water are constantly on tap.

The latest development in the fortunes of the now famous Fryburg horse raid is the purchase of all its stock by Mrs. Enoch C. Farrington of Augusta and Seth W. Fife of Fryburg. With the failure to operate the short line of the railroad last summer, it was supposed it had come to an end, but it is understood the purchasers intend to resurrect it next summer and that the little horse-drawn cars will again ply between the railroad station and the village.

On Monday evening, January 8, Mr. and Mrs. William Pendexter turned their capacious kitchen into a dance hall and entertained their friends with a musical program. Music was furnished by Holland orchestra. On account of the inclement weather many invited guests were unable to attend.

No Cause To Doubt.

A Statement of Facts Backed by a Strong Guarantee.

We guarantee immediate and positive relief to all sufferers from constipation. If we do not, we will return the money paid us for it. That's a frank statement of facts, and we want you to substantiate them at our risk.

Recall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs which control the bowels, in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness; and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Recall Orderlies are unsurpassable and ideal for the use of children, old folks and delicate persons. We cannot too highly recommend them to all sufferers from any form of constipation and its attendant evils. That's why we back our faith in them with our promise of money back if they do not give entire satisfaction. Three sizes: 12 tablets 10 cents, 20 tablets 25 cents and 50 tablets 50 cents.

Remember, you can obtain Recall Orderlies in Norway only at our store—The Recall Store. F. P. Stone, 138 Main St., Norway, Me.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our deep and sincere gratitude to all those who showed so much kindness and sympathy during the long sickness of our dear brother, the late Mr. E. J. Merrill, who passed away on Jan. 24th, 1912, at the home of his wife, Mrs. E. J. Merrill, in the town of Fryburg.

For their kind words of comfort and consolation for his family and the many friends for their helpful floral offerings.

Grace L. Morrow, eldest daughter of Melvin T. and Annie (Robins) Morrow at her parental home in South Harrison on Jan. 7th has cast a deep gloom over the household.

The deceased was born in Harrison, May 25, 1874. She has had a long and painful illness of tuberculosis but has borne her affliction with patience and Christian fortitude. She leaves a father, mother, one brother and two sisters besides other relatives to mourn their loss.

Funeral services were held at her home Jan. 10th, conducted by Rev. C. M. Davis.

Floral tributes were many and beautiful among which was a wreath with the word "Grace," a crescent from the Rebekahs and sprays of calla lilies, roses, pink, etc., from Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Fitt, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Chaplin, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Robinson, C. C. Dougherty, Blanche Carman, Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Green, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. A GIRL'S WILD MIDNIGHT RIDE.

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble, coughs and colds, which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease," writes W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds."

Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Triebule free. Guaranteed by The Noyes Drug Store.

WATERFORD.

Julia Morse has the mumps.

Mrs. F. H. Morse has gone to the hospital.

Mrs. Fred Skinner has been sick since Sunday, but is so to be up at this writing.

J. C. Harvey, F. A. Damon and L. E. Abbott are getting their year's supply of ice.

People are harvesting their year's supply of ice from Island pond these days.

"The Jolly Nine" met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Harvey, Saturday night. Lunch was served and a jolly good time was enjoyed.

What came near being a bad fire occurred at Fred Skinner's, Sunday morning between two and three o'clock, but fortunately the wind was not blowing at the time so they saved the buildings, but the house was damaged quite a bit.

Efficiency.

How Many Men Know How to Keep It at Par.

Thousands, yes tens of thousands of men, grow old 10 years too soon.

If you are a man and realize that your efficiency is on the wane and that you are losing money and happiness in consequence, get a 50 cent box of M-I-O-N-A stomach tablets today and take two after each meal for three days; then take one with each meal regularly until you feel well and vigorous.

M-I-O-N-A stomach tablets disinfect, tone up, restore elasticity to the stomach and intestinal canal and end indigestion. They do not irritate and they increase the nutrition of the body and in easy and nerve exhaustion, sleeplessness, night sweats, bad dreams or any condition that requires a restorative they act with astonishing rapidity. They can be found at Noyes Drug Store and helpful druggists the world over.

Value of Fresh Air.

The absurd dread of "night air," which simply means fresh air at night, is one of the most harmful superstitions ever cherished by the human race.

Fresh air is clean air. You would not dream of eating from dirty dishes, when you are simply filling your lungs—for seven or eight hours at a stretch—with dirty air. Is it any wonder that you rise the next morning sluggish and tired, perhaps with a dull headache and an unpleasant taste in your mouth? Your system has been poisoned, that's all.

Perhaps you think you have ventilated your bedroom sufficiently by leaving the window open for a half hour or so before you retire. That's a mistake. One person can exhaust all the oxygen in an unventilated room in an hour.

Furthermore, to be fresh, air should be in motion. Stagnant air is foul air, just as stagnant water is foul water.

Winter or summer, one window of your sleeping room should be wide open. If the room is cold, put on extra bedding, wear warm night clothes, take a hot water bag to bed with you, if necessary.

Don't worry about taking cold. Doctors realize and preach nowadays that colds, sore throats, bronchitis and tuberculosis are caused by cold air but by bad air. Outdoor sleeping is the most modern and most successful treatment for consumption.

Sleep at least eight hours a night, always with your window open. Drink lots of milk and take three or four raw eggs a day. Chew your food thoroughly. Drink plenty of fresh water. Exercise moderately in the open air, being careful not to overdo to the point of exhaustion. Don't worry even about being thin.

A Sunset Migration.

"The idea of leaving a good warm, comfortable home away out to California for the winter?"

Such, if not in precise language, is the underlying sentiment expressed at the mention of forsaking Ne. England in her grim winter aspect for the gentler skies of the Southwest. In the house, the church, the woman's club, a weekly sewing circle, winter birds to study—what more, pray, could any reasonable mortal demand? Especially if that mortal be a woman of moderate means and uncertain nervous organization.

If Maria fails to find supreme satisfaction in wading through snowdrifts from December to April it is accepted as a logical conclusion that roses and orange trees would never bring contentment. But from years of nature study Maria may have learned wisdom of the birds, whose annual migration from South to North and North to South again is so important a feature of our life.

Once her plans become definite, the unbelieving friends, with true New England fidelity, fall to with a will in helpfulness and travelling cases, kimono, and luncheon dainties arrive in holiday fashion.

Really, the project seems not so hazardous after all, in spite of well meant references to railway wrecks, earthquakes, desperadoes, pickpockets and feverish literature that follows her rather timid inquiries concerning rates and other matters it would appear that just such cases as Maria's were the particular concern of all the great trans-continental roads; for those annual colonist excursions, personally conducted, offer reduced rates in precisely the right time. From so embarrassing a wealth of inducements it is not to be seen. Evidently Maria chooses Southern Pacific, "Washington Sunset Route," for its glimpse of the sunny South, although she is quite distracted between this and the Grand Canyon of Arizona.

A personal call from the Southern Pacific's New England agent arranges everything down to the last detail of tickets, sleeper reservations and baggage so quickly that Maria fairly catches her breath at the facilities of modern railway transportation. All bills prepaid at the home station and only her hand luggage to care for on the way.

A letter of credit carries the bulk of her small resources, ready money being disposed in sunny obscure and ingenious pockets known only to feminine contrivance.

The last fearful good byes are over; the train moves slowly out of the village station leaving a reeling group of clear eyes and a few more apologetic than Maria, with sunshade, handbag, lunch box and umbrella crowding about her in the seat, is fairly launched upon the one great adventure of her life, a journey of more than three thousand miles into an unknown wherein, for the first time in forty years, she will depend absolutely upon herself.

A five hour's ride to Boston leaves a small margin for a farewell view of the beloved New England metropolis before taking the Federal express to Washington. A scramble through the surging crowds of the South station, a hurried hunt for tickets at the gate, and breathless Maria finally reaches her section of "Car One," crouching her heavy luggage with a grateful realization that she is actually off. To her delighted surprise a lady across the aisle proves to be an acquaintance who ventures also upon the California trip, so her way is no longer so solitary.

Sleep is fitful that first night, and when in the wee sma' hours she awakes to find their train just gliding out on the ferry boat for its ride around New York it is altogether banished. How mysterious is that first glimpse of the great city that never sleeps; its twinkling electric lights, its wharves, black with ominous lurking shadows; its towering skyscrapers, dimly outlined, and that one solemn, unwinning eye so high that it might be a star in heaven; all passing in panorama before Maria, crouching catlike at her window amid a promiscuous assemblage of raiment, toilet articles and luncheon, quite distracting to her New England ideas of order.

Of her six hours in Washington, Maria retains an impressionistic vision of the immense railway station, the marble Capitol rich in mosaics and sculpture—most of all the hall where representatives of the nation are gathered, and the one grand feminine figure of Frances Willard personifying the spiritual striving of humanity, the Library where she would have lingered for days in hours over its wealth of mural decoration. But time is passing, and at 4 p. m. weary but happy, she gathers up her luggage for the last time and presently, with suitcase stowed away under the seat and her hat tied securely in its compartment, she is settled in her section on the panoramic hope of the "Sunset" train en route for Los Angeles.

The clean and commodious car, well lighted, well ventilated, with comfortable seats, the entire car is as one big family with a common interest. From the little old Frenchwoman who speaks not a word of English but discourses eloquently by gestures, the two nice elderly ladies crossing for the eighth time, the family of seven going to a new home in Santa Barbara, the frail young mother with her three small children, to casual tourists like Maria, one and all are determined to make the trip a social pleasure and not a mere matter of form.

Peruna Secrets You Should Know

Golden Seal, the root of the above plant, is a very useful medicine. Many people gather it in our rich woodlands during the summer. Few people know how valuable it is in dyspepsia, catarrh, and as a general tonic.

Many thousand pounds of this root are used each year in the famous cathartid remedy, Peruna. This fact explains why everybody uses Peruna for catarrh. ASK YOUR DRUGGIST FOR A FREE PERUNA ALMANAC FOR 1912.

cabins with—at rare intervals, some big old family mansion all rain-washed, grey and dripping.

Then, shortly before eleven, they reach Atlanta in which Maria plans to remain for a few days, equipped with raincoat and umbrella, the music of "Marching thro' Georgia" ringing in her ears as she trips along the drizzling sidewalk, resolved to see at least a fragment of this southern city whose open-front shops, tempting fruit stalls at which one really must buy grapes—so luscious and so cheap—and ever present colored folk are noted with keen appreciation.

A tall policeman on the corner lifts his helmet deferentially in response to her question, indicating the street car that will take her through Atlanta's most interesting streets in a limited time. And when, at four later she returns with accounts of a charming ride and a glance at the beautiful southern homes the many who have spent their interval in the waiting room are quite envious of her courage.

Rejoicing in the fact that the "West Point" route takes them over picturesque lands of the cotton and the corn again, through towns, large and small, teeming with busy life, white and colored; and for the first time Maria betrays real palm trees "growing wild and free" as it were.

It is refreshing to stand on the rear platform in company with the young German girl across the aisle and breathe in great draughts of rushing warm Georgia air while a shifting landscape flies behind them, its red-toned soil seeming to cry aloud of the blood that was shed.

Their first thrill of adventure comes, just before Montgomery in the grave warning to all passengers, particularly the ladies, to close their eyes as the train during the half hour stop at the station, "race riot" in which several whites had been killed has raised the race antagonism to such fever heat that no one is sure of safety except within strict confines of the railroad, a power that even mob violence has come to respect. At first thought the fear sounds foolish in these practical twentieth century days, especially with a town under military guard, but the conductor's words are so convincing, and his jolly face so unimpairedly serious that only a few venturesome souls go outside; to report, however, nothing exciting as the train moves on into the darkness.

"Tomorrow, New Orleans!" That is on everybody's tongue, for the five-hour stay in that quaint old city has been the chief inducement for most of the party in coming by this route.

"We'll take a carriage and drive around the city first, then walk wherever we wish afterward."

"On the whole I think trolley trips are more satisfactory, and they're all bell lines, you know."

Quick Relief for Biliousness.

The sufferer from this distressing complaint is only too familiar with all its disturbing symptoms—loss of appetite, headache, dizziness, nausea and vomiting, oftentimes meaning prostration for two or three days and the consequent loss of time from regular duties. Such attacks vary in frequency and duration with different individuals, but there is really no occasion for them to occur at all. That old reliable household medicine "L. F. Atwood's Bitters," taken in teaspoonful doses, morning and night, never fails to wholly prevent an attack of sick headache or biliousness. If this preventive measure has not been adopted, a despondent when the first symptoms appear, will almost invariably ward off a severe attack. It may be obtained in large bottles, of any dealer, for thirty-five cents, or sample free for the asking. L. F. Medicine Co., Portland, Maine.

Swedenborg's description of the spiritual world, those waste places in which souls of materialistic beliefs delight to wander, dead matter, unilluminated by divine truth.

To the average tourist "scenery" is something out of the common, occurring at definite stated localities like the Yellowstone and the Yosemite, the Rockies, the White Mountains, the Great Lakes. The genuine nature student has learned to recognize the beauty of the grand Whole, the great unity whose elements are majestic, or weird, or "pretty" and graceful, or awesome, or merely beautiful by force of contrast; and the value of these long interludes in nature's harmony.

Ah, the wonderful clearness and dryness of that Arizona air! One breathes so freely in it, whether by daylight at some watering station, or in early evening at Tucson, standing under a brilliant moon in front of the busy station where one stops for supper. Maria felt almost tempted to stop over here, so beguiling was the atmosphere and with its warm breath fanning her face she slept, to dream of California on the morrow.

Without positive assurance Maria would never have suspected the fact, yet according to all authorities the border was crossed at some unknown early hour, bringing them into the "Land of Flowers," still the desert in this lower region of Southern California. True, oases are more frequent with their palm trees growing under irrigation, but not until long after the strange Salton sea is passed and the sea winding up and in and out between wonderful mountain ranges does the reality become convincing.

At Palm Springs one realizes the dawn of a new existence; the Coachella valley suggests that other world whose threshold is a passion, to behold undreamed of visions, made actual indeed, in waving palms and eucalyptus, strange pepper and umbrella trees, live oak and acacia and evergreen. Then the Land of the Orange, with groves of groves of prim little dark green trees upon which the fruit is just beginning to show yellow. Roses are bloom everywhere; while the profusion of geraniums, scarlet and pink, is bewildering to eastern eyes.

The mountains suggest the peaks of old New Hampshire, yet with a marked difference. The sunlight diffuses itself in inexplicable fashion, softer, warmer, brighter, duller, deeper, more universal, more penetrating—how shall one define it? A landscape steeped in golden radiance, yet lacking that vivid contrast of yellow and purple inevitable in New England. A longer acquaintance discloses the peculiar conditions following the dry season, the predominance of olive and bronze-green, of warm browns and ochres in earth tones, and those unfamiliar opaque shadows, which, in spring, will give place to luxuriance of color far beyond New England's dullest aspirations.

Now-day it is only a great, undiscovered, new world to Maria, growing more wonderful with each succeeding hour, until, weary but enthusiastic, she bids farewell to the six-days' home of the railway and steps out into the rushing, eager, curiously magnetic life of the City of the Angels.

WEST SUMMER.

Fire at Dr. F. H. Atwood's.
Saturday about noon fire was discovered in the house vacated by Dr. F. H. Atwood. It is supposed to be caused by the burning out of the chimney as the fire was first seen in the kitchen.
The doctor had been in the house the day previous and was known to be burning out of the chimney and supposed he had it all put out, and was there again Saturday forenoon.

He had not been gone but a short time before a neighbor saw smoke coming from the inside of the house and calling her husband's attention to it he immediately with help went to the house and found the kitchen all on fire. The windows were broken in and the heroic fire fighters of West Summer soon had it under control. There was a large amount of snow at hand and with a few pails of water it was soon all out. The room was ruined and will have to be made over.
